

AAR-SBL
Rocky Mountains – Great Plains Region

Regional Meeting
March 27-28, 2020

University of Colorado Colorado Springs

University of Colorado
Colorado Springs

General Information

Welcome to the 2020 Rocky Mountain–Great Plains regional meeting of the AAR-SBL. Founded in 1965, the University of Colorado, Colorado Springs is home to more than 12,000 students, more than 800 experienced faculty members and more than 800 devoted staff members. On our awe-inspiring campus, we focus on providing an academically excellent environment at a value to students across the United States, and more than 80 nations. The experience our students gain at UCCS provides an incredible service to our community of Colorado Springs and the greater southern Colorado region as a whole, with UCCS contributing about $600 million each year in economic impact in El Paso County alone. For more information about UCCS, see <https://www.uccs.edu/ir/data/quick-facts>.

Sincerely,
The Program Committee and Regional Officers

Ronald Simkins (Creighton University), President
Jeffrey Scholes (University of Colorado, Colorado Springs), Vice President and Program Chair
Lincoln Blumell (Brigham Young University)
Zachary Smith (Creighton University), AAR Coordinator
Thomas Wayment (Brigham Young University), SBL Coordinator
Meghan Johnston Aelabouni (University of Denver/Iliff School of Theology), Student Director

Sponsors

We are very grateful for the support for this regional meeting provided by the Society of Biblical Literature and the American Academy of Religion. We would also like to thank the Center for Religious Diversity and Public Life at UCCS for its additional support.

Randall Balmer

Dartmouth College

“Donald Trump and the Death of Evangelicalism”

The support of 81 percent of white evangelicals for Donald Trump in the 2016 presidential election marks the culmination of the alliance between the Religious Right and the Republican Party. Although many people believe the alliance was inevitable, it actually represents a radical departure from the social reform agenda of nineteenth and early twentieth century evangelicals.

A prize-winning historian and Emmy Award nominee, Randall Balmer holds the John Phillips Chair in Religion at Dartmouth, the oldest endowed professorship at Dartmouth College. He earned the Ph.D. from Princeton University in 1985 and taught as Professor of American Religious History at Columbia University for twenty-seven years before coming to Dartmouth in 2012. He has been a visiting professor at Princeton, Yale, Northwestern, and Emory universities and in the Columbia University Graduate School of Journalism. He was a visiting professor at Yale Divinity School from 2004 to 2008.

Society of Biblical Literature Plenary Session

Saturday, March 28th, 1:00–1:45pm
Kettle Creek

Jennifer Eyl
Tufts University

“Paul, Pistis, and the Allegiance of Gentiles”

Paul’s emphasis on pistis/fidelity is striking when compared to the virtues promoted by philosophical and religious groups of his era. He uses pistis and its cognates more than 160 times in the undisputed letters, despite the widespread popularity of several other kinds of virtues (moderation, excellence, humility, self-control, justice, love, etc). This talk explores why pistis figures so prominently in Paul’s letters. I focus on four functions of pistis-language in the apostle’s efforts to turn gentile followers away from their ancestral religious customs and toward exclusive fidelity to his message and deity.

Jennifer Eyl is an assistant professor of Religion at Tufts University, with affiliation in Classics, Middle Eastern Studies, and Women’s, Gender, and Sexuality Studies. She has a BA in Classics from the University of Georgia, a Master’s in Classics from San Francisco State University, and a PhD in Early Christianity from Brown University. She is interested in issues pertaining to ancient Christian origins, theory of religion, and metacriticism of the study of ancient Christianity. Her recent book, Signs, Wonders, and Gifts: Divination in the Letters of Paul was published by Oxford University Press in 2019. She also co-edited of Christian Tourist Attractions, Mythmaking, and Identity Formation (Bloomsbury, 2018). Her next book project examines Paul’s rhetoric of fidelity as a technology for group formation.

Iliff School of Theology

“Technology’s Subjects, Now and Then”

Forty years after IBM introduced the personal computer, digital technologies have become pervasive, tracking people’s every movement, even that of their heartbeats. One reason for this is the growing awareness by companies, coders, and users of the affordances of digital technology, that is, those possibilities created in the relationship between technology and people. These affordances create certain types of subjects, which for digital technologies might be called “data subjects,” whose behaviors can be predicted with a high degree of accuracy in order to influence their purchasing decisions. But using technology to shape individuals’ behavior is not new. The biblical book of Deuteronomy uses the affordances of writing and scrolls, the new technology of its time, to create its own subjects: Israel. In this presentation, I examine how certain affordances of writing made possible new ways of governing people and use these insights as a framework to begin analyzing how digital technologies create subjects.

Mark K. George is Professor of Bible and Ancient Systems of Thought at the Iliff School of Theology in Denver, Colorado. He also serves as assistant director of the University of Denver/Iliff School of Theology Joint Ph.D. Program in the Study of Religion. His current book project focuses on how Deuteronomy makes Israel its subject in order to govern it. He has been active in the Rocky Mountain-Great Plains region for many years, including serving as SBL Regional Coordinator from 2009–14. He considers this region to be one of the best in the AAR & SBL because of its collegiality and combined meetings.

For those interested, on Thursday evening, March 26th, a combined guest speaker/music performance focused on apocalypticism will be held at the Ent Center (5225 N Nevada Ave.) at 7:30 pm. The event is free and a map is here.
